In 1870 he turned to newspaper and became an editor on the York Tribune. Coming Cleveland, O., later on, he married Clara Stone, daughter of Amasa Stone, a millionaire.

Of the children born to them, the sad death of Adelbert Hay, who fell from a window at New Haven, Conn., is of comparatively recent recollection.

In 1897 and 1898, as ambassador to England, Hay's diplomatic talents obtained universal recognition. As secretary of state, to which of fice he was appointed by McKinley in 1898, the feature of the Hay pol icy was the substitution of truth telling for lying. In this respect he set all traditions of diplomacy aside. The shade of Talleyrand must have groaned could it have heard the utterances of Hay. No less than 40 treaties were ne-gotiated by Hay. The most impor-tant, probably, was the Hay-Pauncefote, which paved the way for the construction of the Panama canal by abolishing the old Clayton-Bulwer treaty, which for years had been a thorn in the side of United States, preventing, as it did, the construction of the canal with-out the consent of foreign powers, chiefly of Great Britain. Two treaties were negotiated to bring about this result, the first having been rejected by the senate, much to the chagrin of Hay, who considered that England had condescended greatly in yielding to the United States. A second and even more liberal treaty, however, was And so she come tearin' along that night-The oldest craft on the line-With a nigger squat on her safety valve, And her furnace crammed, rosin

Mr. Lawson's "Forty Cents on the Dollar."

Thomas W. Lawson is appealing to all policy holders in the three great life insurance companies of New York city to rally around him while he makes war on the "system." of his great aims, as he sets it forth, is: "The reduction of future premium payments to forty cents on the dollar of what you now pay."

It is to be hoped that no policy holder will so much as send his name provisionally to Mr. Lawson, before he looks into this question of the "forty cents on the dollar." The information he needs is available in any book or encyclopedia article on

The policy holder will learn that life insurance is, not a charity or a gamde, but a business based on mathematics and cold statistics.

He will learn that mortality tables are in existence which show the prob-Miss Haven has made a particu- abilities of death of men at each age based on the actual experience gath ered in the insurance business.

He will learn that to cover the ex penses of the business, these net pre miums are "loaded" by adding a percentage of their amount. The premium, plus the load, gives the gross premium which he pays for this

Finally, he will learn that the loading rarely, if ever, exceeds 40 per cent, even in the classes of policies that must pay the highest rate. The new International Encyclopedia, says, in summing up the pertinent facts: "Of the gross premiums therefore, from 16 2-3 to 30 per cent is load

Now, if the current premium rates in this country are loaded only to the extent of 30 per cent, so that on the average, at least 70 per cent of the premium money must be set aside to meet losses, how can any man honestly propose a scheme which will reduce premiums to 40 per cent
